

Steve Quinlan is a Senior Researcher in Political Science at the GESIS – Leibniz Institute for the Social Sciences in Mannheim, Germany. He specializes in comparative electoral behavior and public opinion, election forecasting, public attitudes toward the EU, and the impact of social media on politics. He has been a visiting research fellow at the Australian National University Canberra, Stanford University, the University of Iowa, and the Université de Montréal. Steve's research has been published in various social science journals, including Information Communication and Society, Party Politics, Electoral Studies, Perspectives on Politics, The European Political Science Review, and The International Journal of Forecasting.

At GESIS, Steve leads the Comparative Study of Electoral Systems (CSES) project, where he manages the project's Secretariat, is a macro-political data specialist, and serves on the project's governing board.

Steve received his PhD in Political Science from the University College Dublin.
